BOAT NOTE #61 - U.S. Submarine hit by own torpedo. We shot ourselves, so what else is new, we do it every day of the week. A once secret Navy report recently "surfaced" providing a chilling account of the end of the U.S. Submarine Scorpion and its 99 men in May of 1968. A recently declassified report stated "The torpedo was released from the tube, became fully armed, and sought its nearest target, the Scorpion." The sub's crew probably jettisoned the torpedo after the torpedo's propulsion motor started up inadvertently while in a dry tube. Fortunately the torpedo was armed with a non-nuclear warhead. The Scorpion is one of two nuclear submarines (as far as we know to date) lost by the U.S. Navy. The other was the U.S.S. Thresher which sank off the U.S. East Coast in 1963 killing 129 sailors.

BOAT NOTE #62 - Last Seagoing Wooden Ship is retired from the British Navy. The small minehunter "HMS Nurton" is leaving the British service after steaming the equivalent of more than 10 times around the world. The 425 ton minehunter was built in Northern Ireland more than 36 years ago of wood to guard against magnetic mines. Since, the wooden vessels have been replaced by glass reinforced plastic. My father was head of the plastic testing section of the Naval Air Materials Testing Laboratory for many years at the Phila. Naval Base.

BOAT NOTE #63 - Rivers flood Germany, France, and Belgium ruining Christmas 1993 preparations and a grim reminder of the Mississippi River problems of the past summer. It was the worst Rhine flooding in nearly 70 years and halted barge traffic (like the "Mighty Mississippi") on the Rhine, Europe's main north-south commercial waterway.

Raging waters crashed over the rock at the picturesque Rhine gorge where the mythical "sex symbol" Lorelei called sailors to their death.

Environmental officials called the disaster a lesson in ecological humility - in other words we aren't really in charge, are we?

BOAT NOTE #64 - In this age of wireless phones, car phones, pagers, and other sophisticated communications gear, a long ago observation from a different time frame still applies to Alexander Graham Bell's great invention. The late great Philadelphian Christ-opher Morely once observed: "If we discovered that we had only five minutes left to say all we wanted to say, every telephone booth would be occupied by people calling other people to stammer that they loved them."
